Portable SterJo Firefox Passwords is a portable application that allows users to transfer the site details from the browser's local credentials databases to the clipboard. As well as viewing and extracting site details and user names and passwords, this software package also supports saved passwords view and export and comes with a built-in update functionality. This free application requires no installation, but has some very basic requirements – a functioning system, XP / Vista / 7 / 8 operating system and Firefox 8 or later browser. With more than a decade of experience in software development, I still love this program and use it often to show my friends how many websites I've visited or show them how effective my password or accounts are. My only advice is that if you are about to use this program for the first time, make sure that you have a backup just in case something goes wrong. Also, I have some news for you, but I will write it in a different post (my 2nd one in 1 week!). Written by: Solio I'm a software enthusiast. But it wasn't easy to get here -- and not just because they were supposed to be sharing the stage with Disclosure, one of the biggest new artists of the past year. It was because of a high-profile feud that unfolded on Twitter. If you're not caught up on all the screaming match, it started yesterday when

View stored online passwords Access and export passwords Update program regularly Free Save on Google PlayQ: Existence and uniqueness of the solution of a non-linear first order differential equation Consider the following differential equation: $$y(t) = \left(\sin(t) + \log (\cos(t)\right)$$ where t is a scalar. Let $f : (a,b) \rightarrow R$ be a continuous function such that $f'(t)>0$ for all $t\in (a,b)$ and $f(t_0)>0$ for some $t_0\in (a,b)$. Then does there always exist a unique continuous solution $y : (a,b) \rightarrow R$ of the differential equation? If yes, how to show it? I know that the second derivative $f''(t)$ is positive in (a,b) because of the condition. So there exists a $f(t_0)>0$ if $f(t_0)\leq 0$. But, in this case, by the mean value theorem $f'(t)0$. Now there exists another $t_1>t_0$ such that $f(t_1)=0$ and then $f'(t)>0$ for $t\in(t_0,t_1)$ and $f'(t)

Find out what's new with Pocket The software contains a button that allows you to update a link, which is handy if you write something interesting, but doesn't stay on your screen long enough for you to save it, or just add it to your reading list. Bottom line: Pocket is a simple way to keep up on the internet—see what people around the world are talking about and see when they post new things to read later. It's perfect for most people, but it can be a little tough to figure out, especially if you're not used to the concept. (more…) Love the fact that this firefox addon is free and free in the sense that you never need to pay or subscribe to it. With whatever you do in it you can personalize your browser as you see fit and make it work the way you want.
