One aspect of the standardization process for 3GPP is the development of wireless networks known as Evolved Universal Terrestrial Radio Access (E-UTRA) and Evolved Universal Terrestrial Radio Access Network (E-UTRAN). Such wireless networks operate in compliance with one or more protocols specified by the 3GPP, including the E-UTRA and E-UTRAN standards. Cellular communications systems provide the ability to enable wireless communication using a Mobile Station (MS) in a coverage area of a cellular network. A radio network controller (RNC) is a controlling device that manages the cellular communications system. The RNC is coupled to the base stations of the cellular network and communicates through a Mobile Switching Center (MSC) in the cellular network with other devices, such as other RNCs, end users, or other elements of the cellular network. End users can be UEs, or user equipment. The wireless networks associated with the cellular network are provided for the subscribers' use. These wireless networks are referred to as the User Plane Network.
